Timely Progress Review
Fundamentals and Continuing
Disability Review Protection
Timely Progress Review Fundamentals

• The Social Security Administration’s way to track the progress of a Ticketholder
• Review conducted about every 12 months
• Impact upon CDR protection very complex
• Assignment, progress made by the beneficiary, or payment of services by or to the service provider does not guarantee protection from CDR. Must consider all aspects of in-use/not in-use status (past TPR failures, successful TPR re-entries, etc.).
• Service providers assist beneficiaries through the TPR process
Protection from Continuing Disability Review

- CDR – medical review that determines disability benefits eligibility
- Ticket to Work – initially, no CDR for usually about 12 months
- CDR exemption renewed for usually about another 12 months if pass TPR
Timely Progress Review Requirements Not Met and CDRs

- Ticket remains assigned to service provider
- CDR protection lost
- CDR not conducted immediately upon loss
- Rather, CDR conducted when regularly scheduled

SSA sends notice to beneficiary
TPR Process – Step 2

• Selection criteria are very complex and includes such factors as current pay, CDR classification, assignment, and previous TPR history

• If selected for a TPR, SSA sends the Selection Notice to the beneficiary at the conclusion of about every 12-month period of Ticket in-use status. This is to determine if the beneficiary is making the expected progress with work and/or education.

• If the TPM receives the SSA-1375 (part of the Selection Notice) from the beneficiary and the time frames are acceptable (within about 55 days), the TPM opens a case and begins a review
